

Profile

Ana Soliz Landivar de Stange obtained her PhD from the University of Hamburg. She holds a Magister's degree in International Studies (Chile), a postgraduate diploma in Regional Integration (Spain), and graduate degrees in Political Science (Chile) and Law (Bolivia). Her research interest focuses on the field of International Relations, including triangular relationships, especially Latin American-China-U.S. relations, as well as regional integration in Latin America. She is particularly interested in synchronization. She proposes synchronization as an interdisciplinary approach to triangular relations. It is based on the adaptation of the study of synchronization, borrowed from physics, in the context of International Relations.

Before joining the economics team at HSU, she was research fellow at the GIGA German Institute of Global and Area Studies in Hamburg. She has been a lecturer at universities in Bolivia, Chile, and Hamburg. She spent terms as visiting scholar at the University of Aberdeen, the University of Sydney, and the Universidad Central de Venezuela.

In 2013 she got the Scholarship from the Übersee-Club Hamburg for her field research in China. Her studies have been funded by the Deutscher Akademischer Austauschdienst (DAAD), the Hanns Seidel Stiftung, and the Fundación Carolina.

She is a member of the International Studies Association (ISA), the Latin American Studies Association (LASA), and the Latin America Association of Political Science (ALACIP).
